PUT UP STATIONS.

There are now no stations on the Secon Avenue Elevated Road between Ninetysecond and One Hundred and Eleventh streets and between One Hundred and Eleventh and One Hundred and Twentyseventh streets. The Company was ordered to take the intermediate stations down in default of the payment of damages to property-holders. Col. Hain, when asked if other stations would be erected, said :

That depends upon the property-owners. In order to build a station we must get the consent of people who own property on the four corners. If the men who own property along the road refuse to allow us to build stations other people must suffer.

But the people must not suffer. Col Hain cannot expect that the corner property owners, to oblige the Elevated Railroad Company, will depreciate the value of their holdings, and the Legislature should compel the Company to buy the corners and put up stations wherever they are neces-

GENTLEMEN HANGMEN.

The worthy who fixed the rone about REGINALD BINGHALL'S neck and launched him into eternity seemed rather elated over his function. He has been expelled from a boat club of which he was a member, which shows how different an opinion exists re garding his office. A hangman may exist as a necessity

DEAD BOYALTY.

The King of Holland is dead. The only absolutely monarchical ruler is Death, and his kingdom cannot be overthrown. But when he levels nis dart at other kings he is purifying the social atmosphere. " /-Roi est mort: Vine ie Hoi!" should pass forever from the lips of men.

The time may come when kings will only exist in the history of the past. It will be a beneficent change in the world when that comes to pass. Let men rule themselves, not be in thrall to one who has no higher claim to their submission than any other of their fellow men.
